Preamble to my Lord Coningesby's Patent.

In Latin.

QUum ſubditos noſtros, quò melius Communi Patriæ Bono in omni tempore ab iis conſultum eſt, eò nobis devinctiores, et promovendæ Regni noſtri Saluti aptiores experti ſimus, hoc nobis animum lubentiſſimè induxit perquam fidelem et Dilectum Conſiliarium noſtrum Thomam Dominum de Coningesby præcipuo quodam Gratiæ noſtræ indicio coboneſtandi; utpote qui nullum verè diſcrimen poni debere ratus inter Regis commoda et Populi, id imprimis, et penè unicum contendiſſe videtur, ut Principis authoritas, et Patriæ Leges ſe invicem munirent, ac confirmarent. Hoc ſanè videtur tanquam ingenitum ex longâ Majorum ſerie ſibi acceptum retuliſſe, quorum complures à multis vetrò ſeculis, imò à Saxonicis ad hacuſque tempora, intaminatum Gloriæ curſum tenentes, etiam cum Fortunarum, Honorum, vitæque diſpendio, inclaruerunt; et inter eos præcipuè notandus eſt Johannes Dominus de Coningesby, qui in prælio fortiter rem gerens, Publicæ Libertatis vindex occubuit. At certè eorum damna in nobis eſt quodammodò rependere, dum facimus, quò tam vetuſtæ domus Memoria ſatis clarè pro meritis eluceſcat: Neque verò quicquam magis æquum duximus, quàm ut honoris titulos, quos ob aſſerendæ Patriæ jura amiſerint Majores, eandem jam cauſam tuentes recuperent Poſteri. Quam ſirenuè has partes Virtutum harum Hæres, de quo nunc agitur, ſuſtinuit, ferè univerſa Populi Vox in Angliâ, et Hiberniâ, ſatis abundè teſtatur; ubi in rebus publicè gerendis jam diù verſatus, nullâ non tempeſtate, utcunque nebuloſâ et turbatâ, eandem animi vim et æquabilitatem, generis memor, et ſibi conſtans retinuit, Aulæ, et Senatûs tam blanditiis quàm minis æquè ſemper immotus. Hiſce de rationibus à Glorioſiſſimo Anteceſſore noſtro Rege Gulielmo Tertio inter Hiberniæ Proceres ſedem obtinuit; et iiſdem de cauſis jam tandem hujuſce pariter Regni noſtri Proceribus eum adſcribi volumus. Sciatis igitur, &c.

In Engliſh.

AS they, who have upon all Occaſions acted moſt zealouſly for the Common Good of their Country, have likewiſe approved themſelves the beſt Subjects to Us, and the moſt ready to promote the Service of Our Government; it is chiefly upon this Motive, that We have been induced to beſtow upon Our Right Truſty and Well-beloved Counſellor Thomas Lord Coningesby ſome ſpecial Mark of Our Favour, as a Perſon, who conſidering that no real Diſtinction ought to be made between the Intereſt of the Prince and his People, has always made it his chief Care, that the Power of the Crown, and the Laws of his Country, might be a mutual Support and Defence to each other. This indeed is what ſeems to have been born with him, and derived down to him from a long Train of Anceſtors, many of whom have ſignalized themſelves in the ſeveral Ages wherein they lived, even from the Saxons down to theſe preſent Times, by their unſullied Courſe of Virtue with Regard to the Publick; and that at the Expence of their Eſtates, their Honours, and their Lives: And among them John Lord Coningesby deſerves a more particular Notice, who died in the Field in Defence of the Publick Liberty. As to the Loſſes they have ſuſtained upon theſe Occaſions, We may ſeem in ſome Meaſure to repair them, by giving a due Luſter to the Memory of ſo ancient and worthy a Family. Nor indeed is there any thing more Juſt and Reaſonable, than that thoſe Titles of Honour, which have been loſt by the Anceſtors in Defence of the Laws, ſhould be reſtored to ſuch of their Poſterity, as have acted upon the ſame Principles. And how well the preſent Heir of their Virtues has maintained the ſame Cauſe, is ſufficiently evident from his Behaviour both in England and Ireland; having in both thoſe Parts of our Dominions, and that in the moſt hazardous and difficult Times, acted with the ſame Firmneſs and Evenneſs of Temper, always true to himſelf, and the Memory of his Anceſtors, without being byaſſed by the Smiles or Frowns either of a Court or a Parliament. It was upon theſe Conſiderations, that he was made a Peer of Ireland by Our Glorious Predeceſſor King William: And it is for the ſame Reaſons, that we have now thought fit to rank him amongſt the Peers of Great Britain. Know therefore, &c.

Extract of a Letter from Carolina.

Charles-Town, Jan. 20. 1716. 'You have, without doubt, heard of the unhappy War we are 'ingaged in with the Indians Neighbouring 'upon us, who having made an Irruption into this Country when they were leaſt expected, have committed unheard of Cruelties, 'and made ſuch terrible Ravage, as has almoſt 'ruined Carolina, and we are not yet rid of them. 'For with theſe Barbarians, there is neither Peace 'nor Truce to be made, unleſs we are ſtrongeſt, 'or can countermine them, which laſt is very difficult. The large Woods we have, are their Retrenchments; we cannot find them where we expect to meet them, and we meet them where we 'no ways expect them. They have conſtantly 'People among us, who are their Spies, and adviſe them of our Motions; and we have no Way 'of being informed of their Conduct. They eaſily ſurprize us, but they are ſo well upon their 'Guard, that it is extream difficult to catch them. 'Their Stratagems of War are great, and they 'exerciſe them in a manner ſo different from what 'is practiſed elſewhere, that an European General would be much at a Stand if he were to have 'to do with them. They give no Quarter, and 'it is, in ſhort, as unhappy a War as can befall 'us, they having already killed us 500 Perſons, 'without Diſtinction of the Innocent from the 'Guilty. This Country is ruined, by paying ſo 'many Troops as we are forced to keep to maintain the War; and if it laſts very long, I know 'not how we can ſupport it, unleſs we have immediately the Aſſiſtance which has been promiſed us from England, and are in extream Need 'of. This Country would be one of the moſt 'flouriſhing of America, without this War, the 'Deſolation whereof, much exceeds what the 'three late Hurricanes occaſioned, altho' they were 'terrible. The Covetouſneſs for Gain, by the 'Trade for Skins which we receive from the Indians, has made ſome People tyrannize over and 'abuſe them in a thouſand Manners, in leaving 'them to Raſcals, who have made them ſuffer all 'ſorts of Indignities. The Indians before they 'committed Hoſtilities, made Complaints, and demanded Juſtice, but it was too much neglected. 'They began by Maſſacring thoſe among us that 'had injured them, and who were indeed the ſole 'Cauſe of our Ruin. But their Fury did not ſtop 'there, for they killed all that fell into their Hands. 'Theſe People had been always our beſt Friends, 'and moſt uſeful to our Country, and would ſo 'have continued, if the Avarice of particular Perſons had not drawn on us their Rage, which we 'ſhall now have Difficulty enough to pacify. Our 'Town is pretty well fortified, and the Enemies 'cannot approach it; but the Country is too thin 'of People. A good Reinforcement from England, may put us into Security, and gain Advantages, eſpecially if they be Diſciplin'd Troops.
